With these five steps, aerodynamics has been adapted to road vehicles, rather than road-vehicle configurations being determined by the demands of aerodynamics. The shape of cars changed in an evolutionary rather than a revolutionary manner over the years (Figure 6), and at first for reasons other than aerodynamic ones.

Vehicle aerodynamics concerns the effects arising due to motion of the vehicle through, or relative to, the air. Its importance to road vehicles became apparent when they started to achieve higher speeds. The automobile as we know it came onto the scene in the last decade of the nineteenth century.

Otherwise, they would do no more than just measure the aerodynamic characteristics of configurations designed by others.
